These are not puppets you'd see on the Muppet Show or other kiddie programs. Take "Adonis", for instance. He is a grotesque, blood red statuette with a monstrous hard-on that sports a Prince Albert. He also has a safety pin in his lip; nipple piercings; and strange, horn-type growths in his forehead. "Sidewalk Lucie" is a hardened hooker who advertises with her tool of the trade — a bared and pierced pussy — which is surrounded by a garter belt and her tight, micro-mini skirt.

These marionettes sprung forth from the fertile (or is that fetid?) mind of Marion Schnapper, the Frankensteinish creator from the small German town of Schwäbisch Gmünd. Marion got into this interesting little hobby by means of her liver ailment, which at times leaves her too ill to do much else. "About five years ago, I was looking for something therapeutic to do", she explains, "and I started making these little figurines from wood pulp and glue. In the beginning, they were kind of cute and nice, but the more I got into it, the weirder and more outrageous they became." Some of the blame, she asserts, lies with her boyfriend Yogi, who has a piercing shop (Pandora's Box) in town. "We often collaborate together, and I sell these dolls in his shop."

Marion, who has several piercings (her lip, nose, tragus, and navel) and wears some "beautiful tattoos — I just recently had my whole right arm covered", has so far created about 25 to 30 marionettes (the ones with the strings) and another 30 or so of the smaller puppets. "I make about one or two a month, depending on how I feel," she explains. Marion also makes various body parts for the viewer's enjoyment, such as pierced penises, vaginas, ears and tits.

In short, dear Savage shoppers, Marion's fantasies know no bounds, and each of her absurdities is imbued with her own degenerate twist. These would be a wonderful addition to any ghoul's love nest!
